Individual Assessment

The Cultural Orientations Framework (COF) assessment facilitates the understanding of salient cultural characteristics for individuals, teams and organizations.

The COF assessment is meant for self-assessment, individual coaching, leadership development, intercultural training, team coaching and organizational cultural audits. It is not suited for individual performance appraisals.

Based on Philippe Rosinski's groundbreaking book Coaching Across Cultures, the COF assessment goes hand in hand with an inclusive and dynamic vision of culture, beyond the traditional binary and static approaches, which often tend to reinforce stereotypes. Our goal is to help unleash the potential that resides in cultural diversity and to promote the leveraging of cultural differences for increased creativity, effectiveness, unity and purpose.

To analyze your COF results and make the most of this report, we strongly encourage you to read part II of Coaching Across Cultures for an in-depth understanding of the model.

We also recommend working with an intercultural coach certified to use the COF assessment to help bring to the surface cultural orientations you may be less conscious of and, more generally, to help interpret the results and find out how you can apply this self-knowledge in concrete situations.

The report contains two types of information concerning the 17 standard COF dimensions (with the possible addition of customized supplemental COF dimensions): for each dimension, your ORIENTATION (What you prefer) appears on the left and your ABILITIES (What you are capable of) appear on the right.

An orientation (e.g., the deductive thinking orientation) is neither good nor bad. It just reflects your preference. For each dimension, it is represented by a position on a horizontal axis. All orientations have merits. However, they can sometimes be overused or underused.

For each possible orientation, the corresponding ability level is represented by a position on a vertical axis. Each ability reflects how you are currently capable of using the specific orientation. Abilities are a measure of your cognitive and behavioral flexibility.
